The Agent's Guide to Conveyancing Referrals

Turn the conveyancing moment into a revenue line

Every sale you agree needs conveyancing — and most agents hand that moment away for nothing. This guide shows how a transparent referral partnership earns you income on work you already see, while keeping your client firmly yours.

Why conveyancing referrals matter

Sales commission is squeezed from every direction. The most natural way to diversify your income is sitting inside every transaction you already broker: the conveyancing.

Every buyer and every seller you deal with needs a solicitor. You can't do that work — you're not a law firm — but you are perfectly placed to introduce it, at the exact moment your client needs it. Handled transparently, that introduction earns you a fee and makes your service more joined-up.

The opportunity in one line

An agency completing 100 referred transactions a year, at £150–£300 each, adds roughly £15,000–£30,000 of revenue — with no extra headcount and no regulatory burden of your own.

How ConveyQuote works

The mechanics are deliberately simple. You refer in about two minutes; we do the legal-side plumbing; you earn when the matter completes.

Throughout, you keep visibility of every case in your partner portal — from client care letter to completion — so when a buyer asks how it's going, you actually know.

Talking to your client

The introduction works best when it's natural and transparent. Make it part of your service, not a pitch — at offer-accepted for buyers, and at valuation or instruction for sellers. Here are two templates you can adapt.

Template — buyer, after offer accepted

"Congratulations again on the offer. To keep things moving, I can arrange a fixed-fee conveyancing quote for you from a reviewed, SRA-regulated firm — it'll be in your inbox tomorrow, no obligation. We work with ConveyQuote for this; it's a referral arrangement we're happy to tell you about. Shall I set it up?"

Template — seller, at instruction

"One thing that really helps a sale complete on time is having your conveyancing ready early. I can get you a fixed quote now so you can instruct the day we agree a sale. We use ConveyQuote for this — want me to arrange it?"

Why transparency converts

Clients expect their agent to have a conveyancing arrangement. What they're scanning for is whether it feels like a service or a kickback. Naming the arrangement openly, with a quote that arrives fast and itemised, reads as competence — and it's exactly what the rules require.

Compliance and SRA disclosure

Done properly, a referral arrangement is straightforward and fully above board. As the introducer, you're not practising law — you're making a referral, which is lawful and commonplace, provided it's transparent.

- The legal work is carried out by an SRA-regulated firm, with professional indemnity insurance and the Legal Ombudsman behind it.
- The referral fee is disclosed to your client, exactly as the SRA's transparency rules require — handled on every matter.
- Your client's price is never inflated to fund your fee; the fee is paid by the panel firm.
- Your client is never marketed to, cross-sold, or passed around — the relationship stays yours.

Your reputation, protected

Because every matter sits with a regulated firm and every quote is reviewed before issue, the experience your name is attached to is fast, clear and accountable. That's the difference between a referral that builds trust and one that risks it.

Commission structure

Commission is typically £100–£300 per completed transaction, depending on the transaction type — agreed with you up front, fixed per case type, with no clawback surprises. The figures below are indicative; your exact rates are confirmed in writing when you join.

Transaction type	Indicative fee on completion
Purchase	£150–£300
Sale	£100–£200
Sale and purchase (combined)	£200–£400
Remortgage	£100–£150
Transfer of equity	£100–£150

No cost, no catch

There's no joining fee, no subscription, and no charge for quotes or for referrals that don't proceed. Commission is linked to completed transactions, so there are no clawbacks when a client changes their mind. Money flows one way: to you.

£ What it could earn you

The figures below are illustrative arithmetic using the indicative rates above — not a guaranteed result. They exist so you can sanity-check the opportunity against your own volumes.

Your agency	Conservative	Engaged
50 sales / year	£6,000	£18,000
100 sales / year	£12,000	£30,000
Plus remortgage tail (yrs 2+)	+£1,000	+£4,000

Each purchase you refer this year also seeds a likely remortgage referral in two to five years — income that compounds without new transactions.

✓ What partners tell us

Craig H., Director — Independent Estate Agency, Birmingham

"We've tried a few referral arrangements over the years but ConveyQuote is the first one that actually adds value to our client relationship rather than just bolting a solicitor onto the sale. The quotes are instant, the panel firms are vetted, and our clients feel like they're making an informed choice rather than being pushed somewhere. Fall-through rates have noticeably improved since we started using it."

Ben C., Branch Manager — Solihull

"ConveyQuote is now part of our offer from the first viewing. We can hand a buyer or seller a direct route to competitive legal quotes on the spot. It looks professional, it speeds up instruction, and honestly it reduces the awkward conversation about solicitor recommendations because the platform does the work."

Tom H., Estate Agent — West Midlands

"We recommend ConveyQuote to every buyer and seller we work with. It saves our clients time, reduces fall-throughs caused by delayed legal instruction, and the firms on the panel are consistently reliable. It's become a genuine value-add we offer as part of our service."

Common questions

Do my clients know about ConveyQuote?

Yes — and that's the point. Your client's quote arrives with your name and personal note attached, and the referral fee is disclosed as the rules require. We never market to the people you refer.

What does it cost to join?

Nothing. No joining fee, no subscription, and no charge for quotes or referrals that don't proceed.

Is there a minimum volume?

No. One referral a quarter or fifty a month — the same agreed rates apply from your first case.
